PEACE NEWS A FEATURE OF CONFERENCE TODAY

Seven Colorado Springs Residents and Four in Colorado City Among the Lucky Ones to Get Early Homesteads.

Seven winners in the first day's drawing in the Uintah reservation are located in this city and four in Colorado City, and as it is probable that still others will be added to the list it has been suggested by some of the fortunate ones that a register be opened at the Gazette business office and arrangements made so that a meeting can be held and all move together in the matter of filing upon their homesteads.

In compliance with this suggestion a register will be opened today and all citizens from Colorado Springs who are winners in the drawing are invited to register. It is further suggested that a meeting of the lucky ones be held in the immediate future and plans discussed with a view to taking up adjoining claims in the reservation. By acting together it is believed that reduced rates can be secured for the entire party on the railroads; that better land can be obtained and in many other ways the system will work to the mutual advantage of all concerned.

The following interviews were given to Gazette representatives last evening by the winners:

Verner E. Joy, advertising manager of the Gazette, who drew No. 231, said: "I think the idea of co-operation is a good one and certainly I would be glad to meet the other lucky ones and discuss matters with them. I hope they will all register at the Gazette office so that we can get together at once. I have never been upon the ground and don't know very much about it. Of course I expect with such a low number to be able to secure a pretty good piece of land to file on."

Lawrence A. Shyuer, who drew No. 28, said: "Sure I am going to file and so is Mr. Cassidy. That's what we registered for. Don't know yet when we will go over there, but we will not delay very long. I haven't thought anything about the co-operative idea, but as it has been suggested, it certainly would do no harm for us to meet and talk matters over if it is done right away."

Henry C. Schranz, 508 South Nevada avenue, whose name was the 78th drawn yesterday, had a "hunch" that he was going to be lucky. In fact he felt positive that he would be among the first 100 and says he would have been greatly disappointed had he not drawn as well as he did. "At the time I registered," said Mr. Schranz last night, "I had a feeling that I was to win out in the game and the feeling has grown on me ever since. I am not at all surprised but am very happy at my good fortune." Mr. Schranz will resign his position as locomotive foreman at the Santa Fe-Colorado & Southern yards in this city and will go to farming on his homestead next spring. His wife and 11-year-old daughter will accompany him. Mr. Schranz is 43 years of age and has lived in Colorado Springs four years.

John R. Richards, principal of the Colorado Springs High school, drew No. 16. Unlike Mr. Schranz, he had no expectations of drawing a paying number and was greatly surprised at his luck. He has not yet decided whether he will quit school teaching and go to farming or sell his homestead.

Theresa E. Mann, who holds No. 157, formerly lived at 402 West Yampa street, but recently moved to another part of the city. She could not be located last night.

Four Colorado City men are among the lucky drawers. Bruce Steele, an engineer on the Colorado Midland, holds No. 10. Dr. C. R. Ammerman, a Colorado City physician, holds No. 17. Charles C. Holton, a Colorado Midland engineer, holds No. 26. Charles Brennan, a bridge carpenter employed by the Midland road, holds No. 47.

ENGAGED IN SNOWBALLING IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME

DENVER, Aug. 17.—The parade of delegates, drill teams, and marching clubs this afternoon was the feature of the day in connection with the meeting of the grand aerie of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. More than an hour of time was consumed in passing the reviewing stand on which stood Governor Jesse F. McDonald, Brigadier General John Chase, head of the Colorado National guard, and the grand officers of the Eagles.

At the conclusion the grand trustees awarded exquisitely embroidered banners to the Kansas City aerie for the best marching club and the Old Mexico aerie for the most unique costume. The Kansas City club consisted of 231 members and headed the procession. A band and drill team marched ahead of the rest of the delegates. The banner they received is valued at $600. The Old Mexico delegation was made up of four members attired in native Mexican costume. This banner cost $500.

Engaged in Snowballing.

A startling feature of the parade was the presence of six wagon loads of snow—brought down from the mountains on the line of the Moffat road, from a point about 60 miles from Denver. This snow was distributed among paraders who engaged in snowballing contests with each other and pelted the occupants of the grandstand as they marched by.

Perhaps the most significant part of the parade as bearing upon the heated contest for the presidency was the homage paid President John F. Pelletier, of Kansas City, by the participants of the parade. The delegations lined up before him and cheered enthusiastically and the drill teams maneuvered. The Hy Davis supporters declared tonight that this ovation was merely in recognition of Pelletier's high office and did not indicate the prevailing sentiment as to his re-election. A statement was issued at the Davis headquarters in which they claimed that 45 of the larger delegations were pledged to vote solidly for Davis, in addition to the majority of the delegates of eight other delegations. This would leave but little for Pelletier and B. F. McGinty, of Illinois. The Davis contingent are claiming tonight that McGinty will not be able to command the solid vote of his own aerie, to say nothing of the entire representation from the state of Illinois.

Ohio Delegates Sore.

There is considerable soreness in the Ohio delegation over the charges that have reached their ears to the effect that the Davis candidacy at previous grand aeries for the presidency was merely for the purpose of securing an opportunity to sell out. This is emphatically denied and will have the effect of spurring Davis on to the pursuit of the office he aspires to, say his friends. The latter claim to have gained a point this morning in the session of the grand aerie by forcing through a proposition to vote on the presidency tomorrow morning.

There was only one session of the grand aerie today, which was devoted entirely to the report of the judiciary committee revising the laws and constitution for the order. It will be several days before this work is completed.

Pessimism Again Reigns in Diplomatic Circles---Deadlock Is Reached With Little Hope of Either Side Yielding---China Rupture Tomorrow Is Predicted.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 17.—The pessimism tonight is based upon the fact that no progress was made today. The exchange of views at the morning session on article nine (remuneration for the cost of the war) showed at once that the envoys were as far apart as the poles and it was passed over. Article 10 (the surrender of the interned Russian warships) was also passed, not, in the opinion of one of the present envoys when the Associated Press correspondent saw him tonight, because it could have been arranged, but within the shadow of the two main points in dispute hanging over the conference, both sides were cautious and preferred to postpone it to the end. Article two (limitation of sea power) is also adjustable after modification, and article 12 will present no difficulties. So that tonight the situation was practically where it was when M. Witte last Saturday presented the Russian reply with its non possinus to articles five and nine (indemnity and Sakhalin.)

The only chance is now compromise—Russia to yield Sakhalin and Japan indemnity. Neither will yield both and perhaps Japan as the final showing of hands will yield neither. M. Witte, under the imperial indications contained in the instruction before he left St. Petersburg, can agree neither to pay war tribute nor cede a foot of Russian soil. St. Petersburg, therefore, in the last resort remains to be heard from. Doubtless this is the reason why M. Witte favors a postponement tomorrow over Sunday. Baron Komura probably will welcome an adjournment of the two days in order that he also may lay the situation before his government for its final decision.

"We are not bluffers," said Mr. Sato tonight, and from an authoritative source the Associated Press received a distinctively bad impression regarding the outlook. It was coupled, however, with an expression of the hope that if it developed that the conference was going to pieces, President Roosevelt might again step in.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 17.—The crisis in the peace conference has been reached and pessimism is again the note. But the darkest hour is just before dawn, and there is still hope. Predictions of a final rupture tomorrow certainly will not be justified until Baron Komura figuratively picks up his hat and announces that it is useless to proceed further. M. Witte at least will not be precipitate. At tomorrow's session, after article two (the limitation of Russia's sea power in the far east) and article 12 (fishing rights on the Russian littoral) are disposed of, he will favor an adjournment until Monday to hear the last word from St. Petersburg.

We have heard that the president, having brought us together, has washed his hands of further responsibility. But he is resourceful. He might do something."

"What?"

"That I cannot say."

The Japanese view was explained.

"We came asking only what we wanted. Our terms were moderate. The world thinks so. It looks bad, I say so. I believe so. But the conference may yet be saved from shipwreck. M. Witte has been gracious. He has done what he can, but he has a future at home to consider."

A very important conference occurred in M. Witte's rooms shortly before midnight. There were present Baron Rosen, the other Russian envoys, and Mr. DeMartens, General Yermaieff, Mr. Pokotieff, Mr. Shipoff, and Captain Boussin, the five Russian delegates. It is the first time a full meeting of plenipotentiaries had been held since the conference began. The preliminary discussion of the Japanese conditions is already virtually ended. It is not improbable that the final report and recommendations of the Russian envoys was passed upon and transmitted tonight to the emperor at Peterhof. It can be stated that the individual views of the members of the Russian mission differ as to what point should be yielded if a compromise is to be offered. Some favor the surrender of Sakhalin, others an indemnity. None are ready to give up both points.

COAST DEFENSE VESSELS TO PASS THE NEW REGULATIONS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 17.—China has at least constructively become a party to the negotiations. Article seven, relating to the transfer to China of the branches of the Chinese Eastern railroad running south from Harbin, which was agreed to by the peace plenipotentiaries "in principle" yesterday, involves perhaps in the final settlement, prolonged and complicated conditions by China and Japan and the Peking government and Russia. Russia has agreed to surrender the road to China and give up her concession obtained in 1898, but China must assent, and assent means she must agree to remunerate the Russian government which guaranteed the bonds for the building of the railroad. Japan also has her claim for the rebuilding of the road destroyed by the Russian army, the reconstruction of bridges and change of gauge. The matter remains primarily to be adjusted by the Japanese and China and it is not unlikely that the Tokio government is already in communication with the Peking government on the subject.

Possibly an answer from China is essential to final agreement upon article seven and this may be the true reason for the postponement after "accord in principle" had been reached. China's wish to be consulted concerning articles of the treaty affecting her territory must be respected in this particular, at least. China may not care to assume the financial burden involved in taking over the road. She certainly could not raise the money without hypothecating the property. If Japan is convinced that the road will eventually become a paying commercial venture, she might herself advance the money, or it might be raised for China by an international syndicate and become a part of the system of the Chinese imperial railroads.

If not, Japan may, and probably would, for the present, step into Russia's shoes, although she has solemnly promised China to restore Manchuria, and to retain the railroad would be to retain strategical control of the province.

The amount Russia will realize is impossible to estimate. It will be only a comparatively small fraction of the sum poured into it. By the terms of the concession China had the privilege of taking over the road at the end of 36 years upon the repayment of capital, construction and deficit charges. Japan recognized that Russia was entitled to some remuneration, but this basis is not known. The Russian claim was founded on the principle of international law that a belligerent occupying territory can exercise the right of usufruct of private property during occupation but can not confiscate it as a spoil of war.

The original concession obtained in 1899 for the Chinese Eastern railroad, then simply the "cut off" through northern Manchuria, was obtained by the late M. Rothstein, director of the Russo-Chinese bank, and Prince Oukotomsky, and the company was formed for the construction of the road. In 1898, after the lease of Port Arthur and Tatienwan (Dalny) was obtained from China, the concession for the Southern branch was negotiated. It provided for a Chinese president of the road and Shukingchin, who had been the Chinese minister in St. Petersburg, was president until he fell a victim to the anti-foreign Boxer uprising in 1900.

The bonds issued with the government guarantee were sold like government four per cent rentes and are now in the hands of the banks and public like regular government obligations. Although the loss on operation has been very heavy, the Russo-China bank always believed it would become a remunerative concern. One of the big extraordinary items of expense was the necessity of maintaining railway guards.

WATER QUESTION TO TAKE PROBABLE

SALT LAKE, Aug. 17.—The decision of the interior department that the control of the water of the Uintah Indian reservation is vested in the state of Utah will have an important bearing on the rights of settlers who will make homestead entries under the privileges acquired under the drawing now going on at Provo. Practically all the water in these lands has been filed on by private parties and corporations under the laws of Utah, three corporations alone having made filings for more water than is flowing on the reservation. If the claims be granted, the homesteaders will have to make terms with them for the purchase of the water, as the lands subject to homestead entry are valueless except under irrigation. The state engineer has not yet passed upon any of these claims and the homesteaders will probably be given an opportunity to protest before the water rights are finally granted.

Former United States Minister to China Will Return to Orient in the Interest of His Government---Confers With President.

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 17.—Edwin H. Conger, of Iowa, formerly United States minister to China and since last April the American ambassador to Mexico, will return in the near future, if present plans are carried into effect, to China. His mission will be of a semi-diplomatic nature, the specific purpose of which will be to allay the ire by the Chinese of American products.

Ambassador Conger, who has been scarcely more than three months at his new post in the City of Mexico, was summoned to the United States to confer with the president about the Chinese boycott of American goods. He had a long conference with the president today. While neither the president nor Ambassador Conger cared to discuss for publication the nature of their interview, it is known that the ambassador will not return to Mexico, and that arrangements are making for his projected mission to Peking.

Mr. Conger spent eight years in China as the American minister. He was well known and popular among the officials of the Peking government and is influential also among the Japanese who are regarded as likely to play an important role in the affairs of China from this time forward.

While definite details of the projected mission are lacking at this time, it is known that Ambassador Conger's presence in China will affect in no respect either the position or the duties of W. W. Rockhill, the American minister. After his conference with the president Mr. Conger talked briefly.

"It would be improper for me," he said, "to discuss for publication my talk with the president. We did consider the subject of the boycott of American goods in China which I consider is rather serious. The boycott I know very little about as it developed after I left Peking, but I should assume that it may be a matter that, so far as the agitation is concerned, may be well in control of the Chinese government. The government could not, and very likely would not if it could, compel its citizens to buy American goods, but it could say to the viceroys that if must stop and it would stop, too. In such a respect the Chinese are the most easily controlled people in the world."

Ambassador Conger was asked the direct question whether he expected to return to his post in Mexico. He skillfully evaded the inquiry.

"Is there foundation for the report that you expect to resign your mission to Mexico to become a candidate for the governorship of Iowa?"

"None at all," replied the ambassador. "I am not a candidate for any office within the gift of the people of my state."

"Then you expect to continue in the service of the government?"

"Yes, I expect to."

Prof. E. F. James, president of the Northwestern university, was a caller on President Roosevelt this afternoon. Prof. James, when he was president of the Lake Forest university in Illinois, entertained the president who was then on his western trip. Being in the east, Prof. James took the opportunity to accept the president's invitation to see him at Sagamore Hill. The call was purely personal.

UNION INSISTS UPON EIGHT HOURS FOR TYPOS

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 17.—At the afternoon session of the Typographical union convention the eight-hour committee presented its report which indorses the eight hour campaign now being waged and recommends a strike on January 1, 1906, against employers who do not accept the new hours laid down by the union. Samuel Gompers, in his address, commended the stand the union has taken on the eight-hour fight.

JAP ENVOYS KEEP CABLE WIRES BUSY ALL NIGHT

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 17.—If all did not go smoothly in the conference today the subjects under discussion were wholly responsible for the lack of harmony, for the weather could not have been more perfect.

The first few days of the conference went smoothly and the weather was excellent. Saturday was a wretchedly hot day, the mosquitoes were especially vigorous and Sakhalin was the subject under discussion. Not until late in the afternoon did the atmosphere cool and almost simultaneously the envoys, before adjourning their afternoon session, set aside this troublesome article to be decided at a later meeting. Monday and Tuesday were difficult days in the conference room and cold and disagreeable out of doors.

The glorious sunshine which poured itself out on the envoys as they started to the navy yard today seemed to give them hope in the face of the critical problem with which they were to wrangle. All four of the envoys started away in excellent spirits. Their return was in striking contrast. The weather had for the first time failed in its prophecy. The envoys were apparently too melancholy over the result of their long session—or rather the lack of results—to enjoy to the full gorgeous sunset of the ride home through the twilight. The Japanese hastened to their apartments and in a few minutes half a dozen secretaries were busily preparing cablegrams which will hardly clear the wire before the early morning hours. Mr. Takahira dined in his room. Baron Komura dined in the main dining room.

In semi-full dress uniform, Commander Takashita, the Japanese naval attache at Washington, called officially on Commander Winslow on board the Mayflower today to leave the cards of Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira.

The arrival of the Baroness Rosen and Miss Rosen at the Wentworth was one of the events of the day. The party lunched in the private dining room of the Russian mission with those of the envoys whose presence was not needed at the navy yard.

M. Witte's mail increases with each day. He insists on reading all the personal letters which are coming to him from every state in the union. He has been deeply touched at the kindly sentiments they contain.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL VS. STATE PROTECTIVE INSURANCE

New Zealand Expert Declares National Supervision Alone Adequate. Cites Lesson From Equitable Society's Trouble and Draws Some Striking Comparisons.

"Insurance in America is in a disjointed, corrupt and altogether unsatisfactory condition." That is the judgment of D. F. Dennehy, late of the insurance department of the ideal government of New Zealand.

Apropos of the discussion of governmental control of insurance with President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay Wednesday, Mr. Dennehy, who is now stopping at Colorado Springs for a few days, said: "The government of New Zealand can never be brought face to face with an insurance scandal such as is occupying the mind of the United States at the present time because the state department of insurance controls the bulk of the insurance business of the country. There are numbers of private insurance companies which have to comply with the state laws before they can operate in the country and they must necessarily show the public that they can offer as good or better contract than the government before they can hope for public patronage. Consequently the government insurance department is the most prosperous insurance concern and has almost as many policy holders as the ten private concerns added together. The department was established in 1870 just after the lamentable failure of two well-known British companies—had drawn public attention to the need of a safe insurance scheme. Insurance concerns are as necessary to the welfare of a people now-a-days as a banking system, and should be protected by the government in a similar manner.

"Since its establishment 35 years ago the government department has had an unequaled record in New Zealand. Every policy issued by the government is guaranteed by the state. The department is managed so economically that the rate of expense per cent is less than in 10 of the 11 private companies doing business, while the premiums are much lower than in any of the 11. The policy holders share the whole of the profits accruing after paying expenses and allowing for the reserve fund. The utmost publicity is afforded and reports are issued annually to familiarize the public with the working of the department. Every proposal is thoroughly investigated before being accepted, the desire of the department being to insure at cost. A dividend or bonus certificate is issued every three years, but should a policy become a claim in the interim the dividend is calculated to date of claim and paid accordingly. There are no conditions or restrictions on the policy that can possibly be avoided and the policies are easily understood. The department has insured more lives during its 35 years of existence than all its competitors added together. It charges less rate, gives a better return than the private companies, and is simply a co-operative concern which really insures.

"All improvements are readily accepted. For instance, all life policies are payable at death or at the age of 80 years. A more important provision, however, was the abolishment

CHILD KILLED BY MIDLAND TRAIN

Special to the Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 17.—Robert Long, the 23-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Long, of Capital hill, was run over and instantly killed by the fast Midland Terminal train leaving this city at 5 o'clock this evening. The accident occurred at the switch just after the train left the depot. The mother had started for the grocery store and the child had tried to follow when he was run down and killed.

AMERICAN RECIPROCITY LEAGUE SEEKS ORGANIZATION

Better Trade Relations Between the United States and Foreign Countries Its Object---Iowa's Governor Hurls Defiance at Enemies of Reciprocity.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—The reciprocity conference, called to devise means of bettering the trade relations between the United States and foreign countries, finished the work today for which the meeting was called, arranged for a committee to prosecute the plans of the convention and form a permanent organization, styled "The American Reciprocal Tariff League." The committee, which will consist of 15 members to be appointed by the chair, was given full power to organize and promote the work for which the convention assembled.

The resolutions adopted advocate a maximum and minimum tariff as a means of relieving the situation with which this country is confronted, and suggests that such reciprocal concessions be arranged by a permanent tariff commission to be created by congress and to be appointed by the president.

Cummings Eloquent.

The principal speaker at today's session was Governor Cummings, of Iowa, who in a speech full of fire and eloquence, hurled defiance at the enemies of reciprocity. Governor Cummings brought the audience under his spell and except when interrupted with uproarious applause, he held full sway for three-quarters of an hour. Other speakers were Edward Rosewater of Omaha, former Mayor Maybury of Detroit, S. F. Hower of Wisconsin, E. S. Lockridge of Indiana, and a dozen delegates who made volunteer addresses.

Governor Cummings said, in part:

"I for one have a deep and abiding confidence in the judgment of the plain, common people and I want to settle this question in the good old-fashioned way. Let us fight it out before the people. If we lose, let us abandon the attempt, and if we win, let those who are skulking in the shadows of concealment retire to the places that are appropriate for cowards and traitors to the policies of our government. I believe upon all hands that we must meet it in one or two ways, retaliation or reciprocity. The 'stand patters' have raised the banner of the former and we march to the music of the latter.

Not Confined to Treaties.

Many people think that this question is confined to treaties with particular powers but it is not so for it can be accomplished through general tariffs as well as through special arrangements. Indeed it can be truthfully said that with us, if attained in the near future, it must be attained through a general law by a revision of our schedule, for it has been made clear to the dullest mind that no trade treaty, however advantageous to the people of this country, can command two-thirds of the United States senate. It involves always some change in our import duties, and here the trouble begins. The protective tariff was not originally intended to exclude competition, but rather to create competition. With schedules arranged with any fair regard for this definition, reciprocity would be the weapon with which to

Our Foreign Markets.

"Our present schedules, however, are in the main intended to be prohibitive if American products are sold at a fair and reasonable profit. It is only when, through combination or unusual demand, the home manufacturer lifts the home price into the region of robbery that his foreign competitor can enter at all. There is no conflict and can be none between protection and reciprocity. It is just as essential and beneficial to our producers to preserve and enlarge their markets abroad as it is to preserve and enlarge their markets at home.

"The folly of maintaining a tariff schedule that will enable us to sell $1,000 dollars of manufactured merchandise in our markets, but which will prevent the sale of ten thousand dollars worth of manufactured or agricultural products in foreign markets is so striking that it can be only explained by the hypothesis that we have surrendered to a fear of disturbing commercial tranquillity. The demand we make is not new. The men who today are the exponents of the stand-pat theory of the government are not protectionists; they are exclusionists.

"The first step toward reciprocity is to plant deep in the minds of the people the truth that many of our schedules are too high and should be reduced to create a sentiment that duties can be changed without empedilling business stability." So long as it is a popular system that makes the home consumer pay more than the foreign consumer for the same product from the same factory there is no hope for reciprocity.

"I appeal to the protectionists of the United States to stand by the old doctrine to follow Blaine and Garfield, Sherman and McKinley, and not to confound the time-honored and time-tried policies exemplified in those leaders of thought with the selfish fallacies that are now proclaimed as the faith of the fathers."

ADOLPH DENVER'S TUNNEL REPORT

Special to the Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 17.—A. C. Jacquith, chief engineer of the El Paso tunnel, who will have a similar position with the new drainage tunnel, which will cut the district at a depth of 2,000 feet, stated today that the work on the new tunnel will be started between October 1 and 20.

The property has already been secured for the tunnel site and surveyors have run a line for the water flume. The water will be conveyed by pipe and will have a fall of nearly 1,400 feet in the mile.

From the portal of the new tunnel to the old El Paso shaft is just about three and one-half miles, and it is estimated that this amount of work will be performed before they tap the real water course.

When seen last evening, Sherwood Aldrich, chairman of the mine owners' committee, denied the truth of the report that work on the new drainage tunnel will be started early in October. Mr. Aldrich says not enough funds have yet been subscribed to warrant the beginning of the work.

Her head and body was a mass of sores, and she despaired of recovery. Finally, after spending hundreds of dollars on doctors, growing worse all the time, living in misery for years, with hair whitened from suffering and body terribly disfigured, she was completely cured by two cakes of Cuticura Soap, five boxes of Cuticura, and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent.—Geo. NEGROES CRAZED WITH FEAR FLEE THE TOWNS

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 17.—Between 20 and 30 negroes occupying the first car on an Atlantic coast line excursion train from Kinston, N. C., to this city were killed or injured six miles from this city shortly after noon today. The train consisting of the engine and six coaches plunged through an open draw of the bridge at Bruce station, the engine and one coach being completely submerged in about 12 feet of water and the second coach partly submerged.

It is difficult at this time to estimate the number of the dead. It is believed every person in the first car perished, none having yet been accounted for. With the exception of the train crew and the promoters of the excursion, all on board were colored. The engineer, fireman and conductor escaped.

The specific orders of the road to stop all trains at the bridge whether the draw is open or not, was apparently ignored. Both the engineer and fireman discovered the open draw too late to stop. The air brakes were applied but did not work properly.

STOPS HAY FEVER ATTACKS.
Ascatco the Famous Austrian Cure For Hay Fever, Catarrh and Asthma
NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Evidence of the wonderful merit of the Austrian drug ascatco in preventing hay fever attacks continue to pour in from all parts of the country. The distressing symptoms of the disease are instantly checked by the use of ascatco and subsequent attacks are avoided if treatment is continued until frost.
Its results in catarrh, asthma and bronchitis are marvelous. The Austrian dispensary, 342 West 25th street, New York city, will furnish a test treatment of ascatco to all who write for it. The dose is small, pleasant to take and the remedy carries the indorsement of the medical profession.

MESSENGER GETS AWAY WITH $10,000 OF FIRM'S MONEY

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Gus Bobbs, a messenger employed by the drygoods house of Charles Stevenson & Bros., has disappeared with $10,000 of the firm's money and a reward of $500 has been offered for his capture. Bobbs was employed in the place of the regular messenger who is on a vacation. He was sent to the bank today to make a deposit, carrying $10,000 with him. He did not appear at the bank and later it was learned that he had left for New York.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 17.—Official report to 6 p. m.:

New cases, 77; total to date, 1,223. Deaths, 4; total to date, 180. New suspected, 14; total to date, 262. Number of cases under treatment, 475.

While the daily record of new cases shows a tendency to rise slowly, the deaths are still few, which stimulates the hope for better things before long.

The most important news outside of the city came from La Fourche parish where the parish health officer reports widespread infection in the Leeville settlement at the mouth of Bayou La Fourche. He says there are probably a hundred cases of sickness. He diagnosed six as yellow fever or dengue. This point is 80 miles south of the Southern Pacific railway. The inhabitants of the settlement are mostly fishermen and oystermen and they are in close communication with New Orleans. A case was found in Raine, in Acadia parish, just across the street from the dead case discovered there yesterday.

There are four new cases at Mississippi City, making 13 now under treatment. The discovery of this nest of infection on the Mississippi coast of such long standing has caused a good deal of unrest in Mississippi and there is now a fear that cases may appear where least expected.

"YORK STATE FOLKS"

What promises to be the most notable event of the theatrical season is the engagement of Arthur Sidman's "York State Folks," which comes to the Opera house next Tuesday evening.

The play, the company, the unusually pretty scenery have been the general topic of conversation since its presentation here. "York State Folks" is different from the usual run of rural plays, for it leaves a distinct impression of its own upon the mind of the spectator. To the habitual theater goer, tired of the stage fiction, stage villain and stage heroics, this absolutely natural depiction of the American village life, just as it actually exists, comes as a pleasing variation. There is an abundance of bright dialogue, droll humor and the pathos and sentiment of the play is not of the artificial sort. The stage settings are remarkably elaborate and many of the scenes are so well managed as to receive heartier applause than ever was here before.

Notwithstanding this is a high-priced attraction, Manager Nye has decided to make the prices within the reach of all—25c, 50c, 75c and $1.00. No higher. Seats will be on sale Saturday.

ENCHANTMENT TONIGHT.

The second performance in Colorado Springs of "Enchantment," a spectacle of fairyland, will be given at the Opera house this evening. There are over 150 people in the cast, including a bevy of the sweetest little tots in town, who, in beautiful costumes bedecked with spangles, will be the chief feature of the production. For several weeks rehearsals have been conducted by John E. Owen, of New York, a master of stagecraft.

The sale of tickets was large last night and crowded houses are promised at each of the two other presentations—tonight and Saturday afternoon.

CURTIS MUSICAL COMEDY SHOW

Mr. Chas. J. Burkhardt, who is the leading comedian with "A New York Girl," and "Whirley Girley," the magnificent extravaganza which will be seen here at the Opera house for one week commencing Monday, supported by a company of 25 people, has been identified with some of the best theatrical enterprises in the east; a season with the well-known Ward and Vokes, "Head Waiters," several seasons with the LaSalle stock company of Chicago; a season with "A Run on the Bank" and other first-class organizations. As a comedian he is classed with the top-notchers, and it requires a large salary and a first supporting company to tempt him to leave New York.

In the company are such clever people as Miss Ida Howell, singing and dancing comedienne, who is featuring the following musical hits, "I'm Looking for a Sweetheart," "A Picnic for Two," "I've Got My Fingers Crossed" and "Lindy." Her success has been phenomenal. She is a beautiful woman of the Anna Held type. A fascinating feature of the company is the "Broilers," sixteen of the prettiest and most bewitching singing and dancing girls, handsomely gowned, who nightly dance themselves into the graces of the public. The company as a whole is equal to any production touring the western country. Popular prices will prevail—50 cents being the highest priced seats.

SOUVENIR MATINEE AT THE EMPIRE

Today is souvenir matinee for the ladies, and those who appreciate a pretty and useful souvenir should attend the Empire.

They may be sure that the show will please them, for the Empire is now to Colorado Springs what the Orpheum is to Denver, and nothing but the finest of high-class acts will be presented. The houses have been packed at every performance this week, and nothing but praise has been heard of the show.

The management announces for next week the famous comedy musical and dancing act of Montgomery and Canter, which has been featured through all of the large houses of the east. This will undoubtedly be one of the feature acts of the entire season. Other headliners will be on the bill, making it as good if not better than this week. Mr. Clay Truss will feature Albert Von Tilzer's latest march song "hit," entitled "Bunker Hill," the illustrations being among the best ever produced by photography. They were taken from the original pictures in the museum of art in Central park, New York.

FIREMEN HANDICAPPED BY LOW WATER PRESSURE

The fire department was badly handicapped yesterday afternoon at a fire on the east side through lack of water pressure. The alarm was received at 5:18 p. m. from box No. 35 and the central station companies responded. The fire was located in the rear of the residence of F. H. Martin, city chemist, 739 East Cimarron street, and among the property destroyed was a large pigeon house, coal shed, etc., valued at $200.

Boys' department will dine in the boys' parlors this evening and hear reports on the work done at the Lake Geneva Boys' conference from Robert Hamilton, Chester Whitaker and Jesse C. Arnold, Colorado Springs boys who attended the conference. Mr. Arnold, who is secretary of the Boys' department, returned yesterday from Lake Geneva and the other delegates returned last week.

BASEBALL—The Colorado Springs baseball team will meet the Colorado & Southern nine, of Denver, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Boulevard park. Bernard and Schwartz will do the battery work for the locals.

The size of the vote is very gratifying to the leaders of the storthing and has aroused intense interest. At the last general election for members of the storthing only 286,841 votes were cast.

BIG ATTENDANCE BOOSTERS
REPORT SMALL RESULT

Last night Dr. John D. Fox, of Chicago, faced the finest audience that has assembled in the Chautauqua auditorium this season, and the lecturer evidently appreciated the occasion, for rarely has a more inspiring address been heard in Colorado Springs than the one he gave on "The Neglected Cavalier."

Dr. Fox is a born platform man; clean cut in thought and delivery and simply sublime in some of his flights of eloquence. Taking Sir Walter Raleigh as his hero, he graphically pictured his character and with consummate mastery of his theme, traced the wonderful development of the lofty ideals that have been written in the history of Saxon achievement down to our own day. It was a lecture not soon to beforgotten, and some of his passages were like flakes of fire falling on the imagination.

Dr. Fox will speak again this afternoon on "Characters We Have Met." Yesterday afternoon the Rev. Hubert Knickerbocker of Dallas, Texas, in a most brilliant address on "Rays of Sunlight in the South Land," swayed his audience at will. He has the typical southern style of oratory; fresh, breezy, interspersed with humor and pathos. The large number of southerners in the audience were justly proud of their representative on "Dixie day."

Miss Norris, the impersonator from St. Louis, made her first appearance and was well received. The musical numbers were by Mrs. Genevieve Clark Wilson whose singing is of a high order.

At the close of Dr. Fox's lecture, Rose Ivy again exhibited her strange powers and although the hour was late very few of the large audience left their seats. Amazement was written on every face as she set at defiance the combined muscular force brought to bear against her.

Today Mrs. Genevieve Wilson will appear again and Miss Norris will give her impersonations. Prof. Willet will also sing.

In the afternoon Dr. Fox will lecture on "Characters We Have All Met," and at night Mrs. Grace Dunne of Boston, the interpretive reader, will make her first appearance, taking "Ivanhoe" as her opening number, in which she is said to be unique. And Rose Ivy, by special request, will also appear.

Saturday is given up to the boys under direction of Y. M. C. A. and at 10:30 a. m. Judge Lindsey of Denver will deliver an address on "Boys."

BOOSTERS LAND TWO GOOD ONES

L. T. U. CONVENTION FOR 1906 AND THE IMPERIAL PALACE KNIGHTS OF KHORASSAN IN 1907.

Two more conventions for Colorado Springs.

The International Typographical Union will meet here in 1906.

The Typographical union, at its convention at Toronto, decided yesterday to come to Colorado Springs next year. And it was all caused by the whirlwind campaign conducted by the bunch of boosters who represented the City of Sunshine. Pittsburg and Newark wanted the convention badly, but their heads began to swim when the Springs vote-getters got into action. W. A. Snyder, foreman of the Gazette, was the delegate from Colorado Springs union No. 82 and he received strong backing from Henry Russell Wray, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; W. J. Snider, president of No. 82 and an employe of the Gazette; Charles Deacon, superintendent of the Union Printers' home; John F. Jones, of the El Paso County Democrat, and Charles Carter, a member of No. 82.

Eugene S. Cohen is to be credited for bringing the Khorassan convention to this city. He is representing Colorado at the Imperial Palace at Detroit and, at his invitation, that order decided yesterday to meet here two years hence.

ENCHANTMENTS GIVEN PRODUCTION

A delighted audience which only fairly filled the lower floor and balcony of the Opera house was present at the opening performance of "Enchantment" last night. It went almost without a hitch and was without doubt the best amateur entertainment seen here for years. Those connoisseurs who were conspicuous by their absence last night had better see "Enchantment" and see what local talent can accomplish under competent and experienced direction.

The Misses Sandstedt and Bannigan as Titania and the queen of the flowers, carried off the vocal honors, each richly meriting the encore she received. Little Miss Price as Moth was excellent and the same may truthfully be said of Miss Harden. Of course Mr. Owens as the Ogre was all that could be desired. Ray Shaw had little to do but did that little well. The costumes were excellent, some of them brilliant and the tableaux displayed a wealth of color seldom seen in a professional performance. The music, too, is quite catchy and all from the little ones up seemed to have been thoroughly trained and their attack was perfect.

Those who fail to see "Enchantment" tonight or on Saturday matinee will miss a genuine treat. The performance is meritorious enough to crowd the Opera house on both occasions, without considering a moment the very laudible cause for which "Enchantment" is given.

If it is not curable you will be frankly told so, and will be advised free of charge what is best for you to do. This is not a charity proposition. Hundreds of Colorado Springs' best citizens are availing themselves of this offer, and no one is too good to accept it.

THE NEW YORK DOCTORS ARE SPECIALISTS IN CHRONIC DISEASES, and their office is especially equipped for treating those diseases. They use the X-Ray in diagnosing certain troubles. Static electricity is used in the Transfusion method for treating consumption. In this treatment antiseptic medicines are forced into the lungs by static electricity killing the bacilli and the lungs are healed by the inhalation of antiseptic and healing oils. These oils are forced into the lungs by compressed air. The treatment is entirely painless and highly exhilarating. Mechanical Vibratory Stimulation and Osteopathy are used in diseases of the circulation and nervous system.

The application of superheated dry air is used in the treatment of rheumatism and blood diseases. Every case cured.

DISEASES OF WOMEN treated without operation. DISEASES of MEN cured to stay cured. The New York Doctors will examine you free and give you free treatment (medicines excepted), and there is no excuse for your being sick any longer, if you will only avail yourself of this offer.

THESE WOMEN ARE MADE WELL AND STRONG

Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Rests Upon the Fact that It Really Does Make Sick Women Well

Thousands upon thousands of American women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Their letters are on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office, and prove this statement to be a fact and not a mere boast.

Overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine, and compared with it all other medicines and treatment for women are experiments.

Why has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound accomplished its widespread results for good?

Why has it lived and thrived and done its glorious work for a quarter of a century?

Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medicine has even approached its success is plainly and positively because there is no other medicine in the world so good for women's ills.

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant—not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the uterine system, positively CURING disease and displacements and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due. If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it will effect a cure.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhœa, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration, or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Anyway, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. It's free and always helpful.

VARIETY OF FORTUNE FOR PROF. RICHARDS

As though to offset the good luck which Prof. J. R. Richards experienced in the drawing at the Uintah reservation yesterday, a slight touch of misfortune overtook him last evening when a residence owned by him at 423 East Washington street caught fire. A pan of hot ashes left on a back porch ignited the woodwork and a lively blaze resulted. The central and north end stations responded, but timely work with available garden hose had proved effectual. The damage was nominal.

SPRINGS WINS I. T. U. CONVENTION.

IT IS hard to say whether Colorado Springs or the International Typographical Union is the more to be congratulated on the decision of the Toronto convention to hold its next annual gathering in this city. The convention, which will be held one year from this month, will bring to Colorado Springs perhaps 1,000 representative printers from all over the United States and Canada, which will result in advertising of inestimable benefit to this city. These men, in turn, will be able to spend their outing in the cool shadow of Pike's Peak and to inspect the Home to whose support they contribute thousands of dollars each year.

No labor organization in the world enjoys a better deserved reputation for solidity, conservatism and wise management than the International Typographical Union. It is all-powerful in the printing trade of this country and Canada, and yet it is so well conducted that strikes are almost unknown and rarely if ever is there a complaint from employers of any abuse of its power. The I. T. U. is a model which more radical labor organizations might well follow with great benefit to themselves and those with whom they have dealings.

To entertain the delegates of such a union at their annual convention is a pleasure to which Colorado Springs will look forward eagerly. The sessions of the convention will begin the first Monday in August, and will continue for six full days, making it necessary for the delegates to remain here at least eight days. There will be about 300 delegates, most of whom will probably bring their wives. In addition to these the conventions are always attended by a great many printers who are not delegates, so it is reasonable to estimate the number of people who will attend the Colorado Springs gathering at 1,000.

The advantages of this city for such a meeting were so obvious as to easily outweigh the claims of Pittsburg, the rival claimant. The Union Printers' Home, the only institution of its kind maintained by any labor organization, is located here, and naturally the members are anxious to visit it. In 1896 the convention was held here, and the local union contends that the organization should meet in Colorado Springs at least once every ten years so that the members may have an opportunity to inspect the splendid benefaction which their money supports. Apart from this consideration is the fact that Colorado Springs possesses an unrivaled summer climate—an important item in selecting a meeting place for an August convention—and that it has scenic attractions such as no other city in the country can show. A convention is necessarily an outing as well as a business meeting, and the delegates of course want to go where they can be most pleasantly entertained.

The capture of this important convention is the result of intelligent, persistent "boosting," and full credit is due the men whose efforts have been so conspicuously successful. The delegation of local printers who went to Toronto was composed of five members, headed by W. A. Snyder, the official delegate. The Gazette sent C. M. Carter as its special representative, and the Chamber of Commerce authorized Secretary Wray to accompany the others and help along the good work. Now that they have succeeded in their mission the next thing is for the people of Colorado Springs to see that the convention is entertained here better than it has been anywhere else.

INSURANCE LEGISLATION.

GOVERNOR LA FOLLETTE'S insurance law, which was put through the last Wisconsin legislature by a tie vote, provides among other things that life insurance companies doing business in the state must divide their surplus among the policy holders every five years. This is regarded by Zeno M. Host, the Wisconsin insurance commissioner, as an important step toward real reform, but he thinks that there is only one remedy which will completely cure the evils in life insurance which have recently excited so much discussion. He believes that every state should have a law compelling life insurance companies to distribute their surplus annually after the second policy year, crediting each policy holder with his equitable share.

The effect of such laws is thus summed up by Mr. Host in an article in the Milwaukee Journal:

With a law compelling annual distribution of all profits, the same as is done by a firm or partnership, the race for bigness, largest amount of assets and largest amount of insurance in force will be supplanted for economy in management and the merit of a company will be determined by its accounting to policy holders.

Enormous salaries will receive a big cut; pensions will be a thing of the past; the funds will be invested in the best possible securities and not left on deposit in banks and trust companies at little or no interest; superfluous counsel receiving enormous retainers will be cut off; sideboards and tickers will not be an adjunct to the offices of some of these companies; capital stock will be redeemed, or, if not, dividends thereon now ranging from 8 to 25 per cent will be reduced; commissions of from 60 to 100 per cent to agents will be reduced from 25 to 50 per cent; rebating and discrimination will be reduced to a minimum.

If the public only knew and realized that out of every fifteen life insurance policies written, only one is terminated by death or maturity, and that the average duration of life insurance policies is only seven years, very few deferred dividend contracts would be written.

It certainly seems like folly to permit companies to defer for ten, fifteen or twenty years the return of overpayments and profits, when the average policy holder, taking a twenty-year deferred dividend contract, does not get within thirteen years of a dividend, and never sees a return of his overpayments and share of the profits.

This has a common-sense sound to it, and the impression is strengthened by some figures which Mr. Host quotes from the report of the Wisconsin insurance department for 1905. The thirty-seven old-line companies doing business in that state in 1904 confiscated $14,000,000 belonging to policy holders who held deferred dividend contracts. The reserve released by surrender and lapse during the same year was $51,717,119.95, while the actual amount paid to policy holders on lapsed and surrendered deferred dividend contracts was only $37,752.52.

United States Senator Dryden, of New Jersey, who is president of a big life insurance company, is an ardent advocate of Federal supervision of insurance, on the ground that it would do away with the conflicting state laws which the companies are now bound to observe. Perhaps Senator Dryden urges Federal legislation as the lesser of two evils, but whether this is true or not it is to be hoped that the next Congress will take up the matter with a determination to settle it in the right way. It is becoming plain that life insurance, as now conducted by the larger companies, is very much of a hunco game, with the innocent public as its unsuspecting victims. A Federal law containing the proper restrictions would give the uniformity which is now lacking in the state laws, and would render impossible further criminal proceedings of the kind that have brought the Equitable into disrepute.

THE BRITISH FOOD SUPPLY.

The question of the food supply of Great Britain in a war with one of the world's great Powers is engaging the attention of the heads of the English war department. In 1902, upon the advice of British bankers, business men and naval officers, the Prime Minister appointed a commission to make investigations and suggest ways and means of protecting the country from a food shortage if commerce should be interfered with by an enemy. It is reported that this commission is about to recommend a scheme of national storage of food supplies sufficient to last the country three months if all importations should be cut off during that period. The contingency has been seriously considered and the commission, it is understood, will recommend some plan to avert it or to minimize its effect. Great Britain is not self-supporting and it is probable that a powerful foe would make food dear by suspending or seriously diminishing the supplies.

In 1892 the United Kingdom imported about 80 per cent of its food supplies from foreign countries and 20 per cent from British possessions. An English authority, discussing the matter, laughs at the idea that the capacity of the colonies could be expanded sufficiently to save the mother country from being starved out in war times. Even if it could be thus expanded, it is predicted that the colonial food would be carried almost exclusively in British ships, and therefore would be subject to capture by the enemy. It is urged, however, that the fact that the United States is so greatly interested in supplying food to England would be a guarantee that it would resent any action on the part of any European Power which endangered the carriage of supplies.

It is estimated that the United Kingdom has no more than three months' supply of wheat on hand at any one time. With respect to meat the country is better off, nearly half of the needed supply being raised in the kingdom. In time of war much of the land now under cultivation doubtless would be devoted to the raising of cereals. It is said that thirty years ago the area under cultivation was 30,000,000 acres more than it is today, and the grain area is diminishing year by year. The question of food supply in war times, therefore, becomes one of extreme gravity.

[illegible] Me

A Novel of the Divorce Problem

By H. A. MITCHELL REAYS.

Copyright, 1904, by McClure, Phillips & Company. All Rights Reserved.

THROUGH the long day Mackemer saw Katharine's face continually—[illegible] face as he had looked upon it that night when Whitney lay so near death—with its tender, beseeching eyes.

He thought again of her early girlhood, when he had first come to know her, sweet in the innocence which had bewitched him while he wooed and won her. And then of her young wifehood, when he had exultantly unsealed to her a hundred hidden treasures in their love, only to grow weary at last with the consciousness that she stopped to him from a higher plane—that the life was too unalterably fair.

Ah! between them there had always been a great gulf fixed, how great it was never for her to know.

To be forgiven by her—perhaps—oh, yes! But to be restored?—The new spiritual discernment, so marvelously at growth within him of late, revealed to him now what a severe moral shock that would ultimately have ensured to them both. Her love had become the great necessity of his life, but though she had more to give him now than her young past had dreamed of—No, no! while with the one hand he might have pulled her from her throne, the other, sure and strong, held her up. He read her letters again, and a cruel dimness veiled his eyes. Isabel, Isabel! He could have born his punishment alone, but to bear it with her! How could he live out his life with her, day after day, moment by moment, punishment inexhaustible! With the unconscious refining of his whole nature which had begun slowly, to proceed at last so rapidly, there was opportunity for the utmost torture in the life which he had so wantonly assumed. And he did not realize that the increasing asceticism of his mind set its stamp upon his outward seeming in a way that piqued Isabel to her utmost endeavor. It excited her—this husband whose repeated conquest required more art than any lover's. She tried to remodel her mind and her clothes to fit the case, and came to fifty shrewd conclusions a day concerning men as they concerned women. Had Mackemer been less imperatively attractive to a woman than he was, he would have fared differently at the hands of Isabel just now.

"Do you know what I would do if I ever found out that you didn't love me any more?" she asked him, suddenly, one night.

He looked at her.

"I would go out on the street and offer myself to the first man who came by." She shook with the fierceness of her emotion, and then she was ashamed—ashamed that it had been possible to her to say such a thing to him.

"But I'm never going to let that happen," said Mackemer, gravely. He laid his hand in passing on her shoulder; she quivered helplessly under his touch.

These were troublous days for Airlie; she found herself a problem not easily solved. For now that all chance of a reunion between Katharine and her husband was withdrawn, she became its stanchest advocate.

"Why aren't you doing something worth while for my poor Kathie?" she said, petulantly, to Regester. "I came home the other day and found her lying unconscious in her room. When I got her revived and scolded, she said it was nothing—that it had happened before. But you know that it is something, and that it's your business to do something."

He looked at her in silence a moment. Then he said, somewhat coldly, "I am doing all that I can."

"What do you mean?" she asked, sharply. "Do you know more about Kathie than I do?"

He hesitated; then he said, slowly: "Perhaps I had better tell you—I think you ought to know—she let me bring Dr. Brigham out to see her last week."

"Dr. Brigham! Then you thought Kathie ill?"

"I did."

"Is she any better?"

"Not yet."

"Will she ever be?" The sweet blue eyes were unflinching.

He hesitated.

"Oh, don't," exclaimed Airlie, passionately; "don't dare to say anything to me. For it's all my fault. I've spoiled everything for her. She would have forgiven her husband and taken him back, and been so happy again, and now—now she is breaking her heart, and she will—" She could say no more.

"Have I said that?" asked Regester. "You must forbid that thought. It will do her great harm in you. And you had nothing whatever to do with her action in regard to Mr. Mackemer, I imagine. She has done her own thinking about that, and she has done it well. Do you know, child"—his stern voice softened into sudden tenderness—"death is such a little matter compared with the disaster that she might have brought upon them both for the sake of a brief delusion in what we call happiness."

"And you dare to say to me that it doesn't matter if Kathie dies?" demanded Airlie.

"I do," he answered, coldly. "Therefore, as it happens, some things worth dying for, though to you it may sound preachy to say so. She can't lose her life more finely than just for them. And she knows that. She has learned a great deal in her little while. When I look at her and see how nobly she has conquered the most intolerable type of suffering, I wonder what the rest of us are all living for."

"But Whit—there is Whit," exclaimed Airlie, in a choked voice.

"Whitney? What can harm Whitney now? The child is as safe as he ever was, long ago in his mother's arms. She has stamped her character ineffaceably upon him. Why do we fear evil so much that we forget to recognize the marvelous perseverance of good? She has entered so completely, so dominantly into her child's thinking that her visible presence is far less important to him than we may imagine. Why, there isn't any death for her. The future is charged with her personality. Talk about heredity! Long after you and I are dust, the beauty of character toward which she fought will be finding nobler expression than we dream of. Through tears and struggle such as few of us are left to attain, she has insured it perpetuation. That is the only life—everlasting, it appears to me, but it's enough. It's enough. Long ago, a pale Galilean achieved it in supreme degree in the same simple, awful way—just self-sacrifice, renunciation, death, if you like to call it so—and there isn't anything better that we've evolved yet as a scheme of immortality."

"I dare say," said Airlie, drearily. She went over to the piano and began gathering up her music, but she could not see it for the tears that filled her eyes.

"Oh, it's nothing to you, of course," she burst out, at last. "You're used to this. And you're so cold. You can philosophize beautifully, because you never loved anything in your life—not loved. I know you haven't. And if you thought you did, you'd mount the emotion as a specimen and put it under the microscope, and just have the time of your life finding out what fool constituents it was made up of. Oh, you think you're so superior—I tell you it's a disgrace to be like that." She was beside herself with grief, the man nobly understood it so.

"A disgrace?" He looked at her steadily, and beneath his intense gray eyes Airlie trembled. "You say that the gift of love is not mine? Do you know it quite galls me to have you think that, because it isn't true."

Airlie said nothing, she was seized by the most inexplicable shyness.

"I think I would like to tell you a story," continued Regester. "There was once a fool—a man, of course—who only found out after a long time that he loved—loved—a little girl, a saucy little girl, who laughed at fools and men, and loved only something she called Art. There was no laughter in Regester's voice—it was very grave. The fool was afraid of the little girl, so he didn't say anything—he just watched her getting older and older until she was a tiny old maid."

"An old maid?"—but there were tears again in the girl's eyes.

"A tiny old maid with short gray curls and glasses, but still rather gay as to clothes. And by that time her voice was all gone, and with it that detestable thing in her life called Art that she was always ranting about."

"Ranting?"

"And by this time the fool was a bachelor of 50 or so, very good-looking and well-preserved, having been so delightfully free from domestic care and worry. Well off, too, not having had any extravagant little girl to provide for all these years, but very charitable and distinguished in his profession, having had no distracting wife to interfere with his devotion to scientific research."

"Indeed, you won't be anything of the kind," broke in Airlie, vehemently. "You'll be all sorts of horrid things by the time you are 50, and married to a big fat woman, and as meek and henpecked as can be, in spite of your fine chin."

"Oh, no, no! You're quite mistaken, Miss Casler. The faithful fool won't ever have married the big fat woman. He will always have kept fresh in his heart the memory of the little girl he loved once, and he'll even be devoted to the cross old maid, who can't sing any better than an owl." He'll watch her sitting in her window with her cat, and a stout pug, and a parrot."

"But I won't be an old maid," protested Airlie. Her voice shook; her heart suffered with fear lest she should cry. Cry? What did she want to cry for? She hated the man.

"Oh, you'll marry, will you? A tenor, I suppose, with the uncertain morals of his sort."

"Yes," she answered, recklessly; "I don't care if I do."

"What nonsense!" exclaimed Regester. He stood a moment in silence, looking down at her, tall and masterful. "Of course, it would never do for you to marry me. I know that. I think the tenor would really suit you better. Do you know why?" She was mute. "Because I should ask more of you than you could give, perhaps."

"You see, I believe in a home," he said; "a home of so fine a type that into it there must enter a woman's noblest endeavor. Nothing else would satisfy me. I do not offer the woman I love an easy life. I offer her a future of difficulty, one that would tax every gift and resource that she possesses. I don't ask her to share my life and some outside interest. I ask her to accept my life as all there is for her—to exalt its annoyances, its stupidities, its anxieties, to the supreme place in her thought. She may have great executive ability—be fitted to move mountains out-of-doors, for the good of the public and her own glorification—what do I care about that? My wife will have to use her executive ability in my home, but she—at least, that little girl—could make of it as radiant and as sacred a spot as this earth has ever seen. And in return for all that such a little wife would bring into my life, what have I to offer?" His tone changed—the strife, the anxiety of the lover invaded his voice. "Nothing, it seems to me sometimes—nothing. Yes, everything—everything—that a little woman like [illegible] ... toward Airlie, but she stepped back, her eyes full of fear, vague, indefinite fear of a future fraught with the mystery of pain—of love. She had grown white.

"Ah, my voice!" she said, in a tense whisper; "my lovely, lovely voice!" She clasped her slender throat protectingly with her dainty fingers.

"Then you love it better than you could me?" asked Regester, slowly.

"Why do you ask me such a thing?" she flamed.

"Because I told you that I wanted no half allegiance. I want all from the woman I love or nothing. I have seen enough of the miseries of men who have married musical women. Do you know what the Lord make musicians out of? All the left-over fools in the Universe, that He can't do anything else with. And considering the stuff, I must admit that sometimes He does great things with it. But He made a mistake, little girl, when He got you in among them. You were meant for finer things."

"Finer?" grasped Airlie.

"Yes, finer," he repeated, stubbornly. "You say you have a lovely voice—"

"Well, of all the impertinence—"

"Then you can find a nobler way of using it, child, and one far more honoring to the Art you profess to serve, than by grimacing upon a public platform."

"Grimacing!"

"Night after night in a desperate effort to please a fickle audience, which is always looking for a fresh sensation, and which will some day throw you away like a faded flower for some new bud."

"So they may," said Airlie, defiant. "By that time I shall be a rich woman, and what shall I care?"

"Rich!" he echoed, scornfully. But presently his eyes softened. "Child, live my life with me, a life of hardship, of toil, of self-denial, but of peace that nothing can take away. Listen! I wish I could feel that your voice should never be prostituted to the earning of money again, but that it should be dedicated to the noblest uses, to the soothing of pain—come with me some day to the hospital—that it was an inspiration, a call higher to every soul that heard it. Airlie, oh, Airlie, should I talk to you then as I do now, when I see so great a gift hawked about from one platform to another, from one church to another, debased to the level of merchandise? Why do you dare to want to make money? Haven't you enough? Is not all that you need provided for you? Have you never thought of some poor girl, perhaps, whom you keep out of a position by filling the one she should have? Have you never thought that it may be demanded of you that you shall not earn, because some other must?" He waited a moment, but Airlie said nothing, and he went hotly on again. "You remember Reynolds? He said to me the other day, 'I wonder if that little girl wouldn't come down here some Sunday and sing to my people?' You know I've told you what an enthusiast Reynolds is, and he got quite worked up thinking of your singing. 'I've got a girl down here who's bothering me, Regester,' he said, 'and I can't seem to do anything for her, but I believe that little curly haired girl could, if she would only sing to her. I believe she could save poor Marie.' That's only the little girl's voice, you know, Regester—it's her sympathy, her sweetness. I think she could get a grip on Marie.' But I said to him: 'Oh, no. She's busy making money on Sundays, tickling the ears of the rich and righteous. She hasn't any time to bother about girls like Marie. You'll just have to let her go to the devil.'"

"You said that!" exclaimed Airlie. "Then just see if I don't go down there next Sunday! I'd do anything for Dr. Reynolds. He's a nice, nice man." She swept Regester with an offensive eye. "There, I've got to catch the five train"—she looked anxiously at the horological bauble that hung in a smother of lace on her gown. "Oh, it isn't going—I forgot to wind it. No, it's broken. Oh, dear! Dr. Regester, what is the time?"

"Oh, you have time enough," he answered, with a provoking smile.

"No, I haven't. I've got to change my dress, and see Kathie, and decide what music I'll sing. I wish you'd go now. But I want to say a whole lot of things to you. You've been outrageous this afternoon. You think a woman was just made for a man to swallow. You'd bound her ambitions by a husband and the kitchen—well, I can tell you—"

"Airlie!"

"Go away," she whispered, "No, I don't. I never will. I'd scorn to."

But when she reached Katharine's room she burst into a little storm of tears.

"Oh, Kathie," she wailed, "that young man says he loves me! Mo, dear, me! Isn't it hideous? Marry him, darling, marry him? Why, he's a tyrant, a monster. He's got the craziest notions. He actually says that if he married he'd expect a home. Thing of it!" The girl's laughter overcame her. "As if any man has a right to expect such a thing nowadays of anything but just the merest woman. Oh! he's simply an overbearing—horror."

"Airlie! You didn't tell him that?"

"No, my precious. But I should have. I shall have to [illegible] enlighten him as to his being whole centuries behind his times, and who so fitting as I under the circumstances? Oh, kiss me, Kathie! How could there be anything dearer to a woman than another woman she loves? What's a man in comparison?"

"Airlie, what did you say to him?"

"What did I say to him? My dear, I wasn't called upon to say anything. Poor boy! He has the most mistaken ideas as to the place of man in nature. He doesn't in the least realise that his sort is as extinct as megatheriums and things. No, he neglected to tell me what he would expect for breakfast every day, or whether he would require his wife to iron his shirts in order that they might have a strictly domestic finish, but he couldn't say everything at once, could he?"

Katharine came to the conclusion before long that to be in love with Airlie was in itself a liberal education for any man. But as time passed a new reserve settled upon the girl, yet she displayed her genius for coquetry as never before, meekly seeking Regester's opinion one moment, only to flout it the next; pensive, reciting, one day, only to be hopelessly defiant another. But in truth Regester perplexed and irritated her. Was the indifference he had so unvaryingly manifested since that eventful afternoon actually as real as it appeared to be? He had never referred to the great question again, when they were alone he positively nauseated her by endless dissertations on flying machines and such! Naturally, she never wished him to utter the word love to her again, but a man who has been—well, refused—might at least have the grace to show that he knew he had been.

many years ago of the tontine or forfeited payment system of insurance. This system has caused much favorable comment in the Equitable Assurance society's trouble lately, as a consequence the New York law, followed the New Zealand example by abolishing the tontine system. This example is one that will probably be followed by all the other countries of this country, for should the state ever control the insurance business a system would probably be one of the most objectionable features to be abolished. It means no more than the investment of the company instead of the company insuring the individual. Most American insurance companies are proprietary companies. The government insurance department is run as a mutual company—that is, companies the latter is a proprietary company owned by its shareholders, who have subscribed capital to give the company start, or bought shares from the original subscribers, while a mutual company is owned by its policy holders.

Second, a proprietary company may sell its shares at any time. Then they may be captured by a band of speculators and the control of the society may thus pass into the hands of speculators upon whose action the policy holders can put no restraint. In a mutual office the policy holders alone control the situation. They are the masters of their own concerns.

Thirdly, in a proprietary company the share holders control all investments and frequently decide what profit they shall distribute among themselves. The policy holders, the remainder simply choose the share holders elect directors, the directors elect officers, pass balance sheets, even though the company has grown to hundreds of thousands of policy holders and millions of dollars invested. SERMONS ON FEDERAL CONTROL

RALPH W. BRECKENRIDGE THINKS GOVERNMENT SHOULD SUPERVISE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

DENVER, Aug. 17.—Ralph W. Breckenridge, of Omaha, chairman of the insurance law committee of the American Bar association, delivered an address on "Federal Supervision of Insurance" before the National Insurance agents convention today. He made a strong plea for federal control of insurance. He said the insurance companies are handled by state officials as sheep to be shorn, their money being used to pay political debts and the people's interest going uncared for. He spoke of President Roosevelt's advocacy of federal control and extolled the president on this account.

Mr. Breckenridge quoted the statutes to prove that federal control of insurance is not unconstitutional and perfectly legal. He said that a number of the state legislators needed to learn "that these states are a union and not a mere pack of snapping and snarling wolves."

BENNINGTON ANOTHER CASUALTY

THE CRUISER CHICAGO CRASHED INTO THE OFF ANGEL ISLAND LIGHTHOUSE YESTERDAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—The cruiser Chicago, flagship of the Pacific squadron, flying the flag of Admiral Goodrich, went aground close to the lighthouse and fog signal on Angel Island in this harbor today. She was up from San Diego with the disabled gunboat Bennington in tow and accompanied by the navy tug Fortune. A strong ebb tide was running [illegible] the current the towline was [illegible] hard. Before headway could be stopped the Chicago ran her bows upon the beach. The Bennington on her momentum sailed up close to the stern of the steamer before her anchors could hold. The tug Fortune soon got a line to the Chicago and succeeded in pulling her clear of the bottom but when she came off she took a sheer that sent her straight for the anchored Bennington. The current of the tide carried her down across the bow of the anchored vessel and there was a smashing of metal when they came together. Finally the two vessels, afoul of each other, went drifting on the tide. Both were considerably damaged.

PORTLAND ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES FROM [illegible]

Special to the Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 17.—The Portland Gold Mining company today commenced suit in the district court against I. Shafer, asking for $10,000 damages for ore extracted from the Captain lode claim of the plaintiff company since May 1, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from working the ore from the C. C. claim adjoining.

A rumor has been going the rounds of late that the owners of the F. C. C. claim, which is but a fraction and surrounded by the Portland territory, would claim apex over certain of the ore shoots of the Bull Hill mountain producer.

HE WAITED NO LONGER.

"You may refuse me now," said the persistent suitor, "but I can wait. Some things come to him who waits."

"Yes," replied the dear girl, "and I guess the first thing will be father's hearing him on the stairs."—Philadelphia Ledger.

RESIDENTS WARRANT FOR HER HUSBAND'S ARREST

Residents of Ivywild Agog Over Disclosures of Alleged Double Life of Dr. Merritt B. Hook Made by His Deserted Wife---Woman Arrested in Denver.

Society in the suburb of Ivywild is agog with the disclosures made by Mrs. Fannie Hook, wife of Dr. Merritt B. Hook, a physician who has been practicing in that part of the city. Mrs. Hook arrived here last Monday in search of her husband, and when she found that the doctor had been living with another woman who had been introduced as his wife, she became indignant and swore to a complaint in Justice Ruby's court charging her husband and Hattie DeMay with adultery. Miss DeMay was arrested in Denver last evening and will be returned to this city this morning for trial.

Miss Hattie DeMay who, by the way, is a handsome woman, came to Colorado Springs about two years ago and stayed at the Cascade avenue rooming house. She appeared to have a great many gentlemen friends. Miss DeMay gave her home as Centralia, Ill., but later it was found that she had been a nurse in a Chicago hospital, and it is said that is where she first became acquainted with Dr. Hook.

Two weeks after her arrival Dr. Hook reached Colorado Springs, coming here in search of health so he said. The search took the doctor and the nurse to various portions of New Mexico and other points south, but later they returned to Colorado Springs. The people of Ivywild were desirous of securing a resident physician and Dr. Hook was invited to establish his home there. He accepted the invitation and accompanied by Miss DeMay commenced housekeeping in that charming suburb.

Being an excellent conversationalist it was not long before the doctor had made "a hit" with the residents of that section and he with the DeMay woman were the recipients of invitations to many social events. Last April the doctor announced that "his wife" was going back to Iowa for an extended visit, and a little later the doctor gave up his quarters and also went away. It was afterward found that the couple had gone to Denver, and they were frequently seen together in the capital.

On Monday last the real Mrs. Hook appeared upon the scene in search of her husband. She was accompanied by a little son about three years of age, and in conversation with residents of Ivywild, ascertained the facts given above. Mrs. Hook said that the Doctor had left her with her parents in Iowa when he came to Colorado two years ago, and during that time he had not contributed anything to the support of herself or son. For a while he corresponded regularly with her; then his letters came further apart. Finally he came to see her, and after saying that his health was not much improved told her to remain with her parents. He then returned to Colorado and she had heard nothing from him since.

CREATIVE OF SUNSHINE EASTERN TOURIST WEDDING

Emerson's allusion to "the tyranny of circumstance" was justified in this city last night when two young tourists were obliged to get married because there was only one vacant room in the hotels of Colorado Springs. That hotel was the Spaulding and the young visitors met the emergency with a marriage certificate an hour and thirty minutes after it had been encountered.

Deputy County Clerk Morton Jones appreciates his duty as a citizen of the greatest tourist city on earth as well as that of a public official and, while he does not mean to make a practice of sitting up nights to oblige Cupid, he nevertheless did not feel that it would be right to delay the happiness of two young strangers in a strange land, so the license was issued and a minister at Manitou did the rest in a most official and correct manner.

Proprietor J. A. Himebaugh, of the Spaulding, gave Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Bayer the last room, wishing out of the goodness of his heart that it was a bridal chamber, decked with the roses of mid-June.

About 9 o'clock last night two anxious young people appeared falteringly before the desk of the Spaulding and inquired if they could get accommodations for the night. Mr. Himebaugh replied that they could and they breathed sighs of relief. Then they registered. First H. J. Bayer placed his name on the register, signing himself from Rochester, New York. Then the lady took the pen in hand and you could have knocked Mr. Himebaugh down with a feather when she registered as Miss Petrie, of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Himebaugh was embarrassed and he was afraid his guests would be. He colored and then a-hemmed. "I'm afraid there's a mistake," he admitted without looking up from the book at either prospective guest. "When I said you could get accommodations I thought that possibly one room would do. I'm afraid we can't manage it."

Then he looked up and he saw a suspicious moisture in the young woman's eyes. "That settles it," the young man said with a touch of genuine sympathy in his voice. "Not a hotel in the city has two vacant rooms." His remarks were addressed to the young woman who demurely dropped her eyes. "I guess," he said turning to Mr. Himebaugh, "that one room will do." He settled for the room, telephoned for a cab and the two went out. An hour and a half later they returned and Bayer said, "just change those names if you will to Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Bayer," and the change was made.

Think!

EVERY dollar you spend for coal is not only lost but also the interest on it for life. How many dollars are unnecessarily spent by people who refuse to fill their coal bins now while the low summer prices rule?

SUNSHINE SPECIAL TO BE HEADQUARTERS

Ode Written by Mrs. Gilbert McClurg Will Be Sung by Famous Mormon Choir at Opening of Irrigation Congress at Portland.

Ten thousand dollars for a song! Julius Caesar boasted a divine voice, but although him was divine. Yet the feasts of a Caesar, nor those of the golden Italian renaissance which followed him centuries afterward boasted of such a song as that with which America will celebrate the thirteenth annual Irrigation congress at Portland next week.

Mrs. Gilbert McClurg wrote "An Ode to Irrigation." J. J. McClellan, choir master of the Mormon Temple of Salt Lake City, wrote the music to that ode. The choir of the Temple contains 200 of the finest trained voices of America. The people at the head of the National Irrigation congress and of the Lewis and Clark exposition of Portland desired to have the "Ode" sung at the Irrigation congress. To transport that chorus of 200 trained voices would cost $10,000. In this age of commercialism, $10,000 for a song would seem a dream yet this has been accomplished.

When it was first made known that the song was desired and that to produce it would cost a fortune, the commissioners themselves looked upon the plan as ludicrous. They could not bring themselves to believe that there was in America a response to the purely poetic and artistic, which would justify an undertaking of such magnitude. They recognized that the fruition of this dream would require a support which the most magnificent productions of the old world in ancient hallowed days had never been required.

Then somebody wrote to Senator William Clark of Montana, who was ill when the letter was received. "Tell them it is a great idea," Senator Clark said. "To me it seems an entirely American idea in the magnificence of its dimensions. I will give $1,000 to see the plan succeed."

Senator Clark is president of the Irrigation congress. The $1,000 he contributed was worth less than his official recognition of the scheme. So the plan was noised abroad. Railroads, wealthy men of a patriotic disposition and such corporations as might be expected to feel a pride in public enterprise were invited to the support of the unusual movement and yesterday Gilbert McClurg, the well known lecturer of this city, received the definite announcement that the work had been accomplished and that the Festival hall at Portland had been engaged for the rendition of his wife's song of the west.

NATIONAL G. A. R. POSTAL SENATOR PARK ON SEPT. 12

Tuesday, September 12, will be the big Grand Army of the Republic day in Colorado Springs. A basket picnic in Stratton park in the afternoon and a campfire at G. A. R. hall in the evening will be the features.

At a meeting yesterday of the executive committee of Colorado Springs post No. 22, having in charge the reception of the visitors at the close of the Denver National encampment, it was decided that the local post would provide its entertainment on the date given above. The encampment will be held at Denver, September 4 to 9, and post [illegible] and vicinity to bring all the veterans to the City of Sunshine on the Tuesday following.

The basket picnic at Stratton park will be the biggest outdoor gathering ever held in the Rockies. The famous Colorado Midland band has been engaged to play national airs and war tunes during the afternoon, and speeches by prominent veterans will be heard. It is expected that all the visitors in the city on that day will eat their luncheons at the park.

In the evening a big campfire is planned. It will be held at G. A. R. hall unless the crowd is too great, upon which contingency Temple theater will be utilized. The singing of old war songs and short talks by G. A. R. officers will be a feature.

"I think there will be 100,000 people traveling on G. A. R. rates in Colorado Springs during the month of September," said Col. Lo. C. Dane last night. "They will not all be here on the same day, or in the same week but I expect that many will enjoy the City of Sunshine during the month. It is a sure thing that the city will have its hands full entertaining the veterans and those who will come to Colorado on G. A. R. tickets."

TWO VERDICTS AGAINST ADAMS

DRUGGISTS HARRISON AND ZOBRIST AWARDED DAMAGES. CHIEF OF POLICE TAKES APPEAL.

Chief of Police Alex Adams lost twice yesterday in two damage suits brought against him by druggists in this city for the unlawful appropriation of liquor. The total amount of the two verdicts was $102 and costs.

The action brought by Druggist J. H. Harrison against Alex Adams and L. A. Swanson was tried before Justice Dunnington yesterday morning. Much time was occupied in securing a jury and finally the case went to trial with T. C. Allen, Geo. H. Hall and C. Heap on the jury. In its verdict the jury awarded the plaintiff the sum of $2 for the value of the goods illegally taken and $100 as exemplary damages. The defense gave notice of appeal to the county court.

In the afternoon the case of Druggist Chas. L. Zobrist against Alex Adams et al., was called for trial before Justice Ruby, the action being for damages alleged to have been incurred by the plaintiff by the defendants taking possession of a portion of the stock of liquors owned by the plaintiff. The jury was composed of Dr. W. H. Woodson, Dr. E. L. Timmons and H. H. Rouse, and after being out but a few minutes, a verdict was returned for the plaintiff for the full sum claimed, $200 and costs. Notice of appeal was given.

The damage suit of Otto Fehringer, 26 South Tejon street, against Alex Adams, will be called for trial before Justice Ruby today.

Nearly Half a Million Shares Dealt in During First Hour.

NEW YORK, Aug 17—Nearly a half million shares of stocks were sold today in the first hour's dealing on the stock exchange. The transactions of the first hour were the most significant of the day and are the crucial test of the market in the majority of cases The extreme animation during that period today was convincing evidence of the growth of speculative interest Large orders came from various quarters Every device was used to make the opening prices high for the benefit of those who desire to realize profits with the advantage of this growing outside demand The accumulated buying demand was fed steadily during the whole of the first hour in the process of realizing profits The result was a growing tendency to yield which became more marked as the accumulated buying orders were worked off. But when this condition of affairs began to be evident there was a discontinuance of the pressure to sell which threw the market of the middle portion of the day into dullness. The absorptive power demonstrated while the selling was active seemed to encourage speculative sentiment to such an extent that offers were resumed later in the day to get prices up again. This has been about the course of the market for some days.

Stocks of eastern railroads were notably held back by the pressure to realize, Reading being the conspicuous example, although that stock touched a new high record during its period of strength So did Erie which was the strong exception in the group Union Pacific was again very conspicuous and was the subject of the most talked-of deals and mysterious developments

These rumors have taken the form of some important development regarding Great Northern preferred, from which it is said the expected benefit to Union Pacific will accrue by reason of its large holdings of Great Northern.

The favorable condition reported by the trade authority in the iron and steel industry had its effect on the stock of companies connected with various branches of that industry There was some special activity in the Republic Steel stocks, induced by discussion of the possible resumption of dividends on the preferred stock The extra dividend on United States Reduction and Refining explained the advance in the stocks of that company

Bonds were steady Total sales, par value, $3,880,000.

United States 2s advanced ⅜ per cent on call.

WHEAT DRAGGED AT FIRST BUT RALLIED LATTER---CORN AND OATS STEADY.

CHICAGO, Aug 17—The wheat market was inclined to drag early Absence of frost predicted for the northwest caused support to be withheld and resulted in an easy tone September opened a shade to ⅛@¼c off at 81⅞c to 82c and declined to 81⅝c before the import of the adverse news began to have effect At this point, however, shorts, who were at first inclined to ignore reports of interference of wet weather with the movement of grain in the northwest and unfavorable foreign news, soon became concerned for their lines Some particulars indicating a better export business together with lighter primary receipts, and improvements in the flour situation started a free covering movement Shorts found little hope in the market. A sharp upturn resulted September sold up to 82¾c, the advance being well maintained during the remainder of the session The close was firm, a shade under the high point, at 82⅝@82¾c

Corn was steady in the face of continued favorable crop reports September opened and closed ⅛c down at 53c.

Packers took offerings in provisions and brought about a fair advance over the previous closing prices The close was firm, pork being 12½c higher, lard up 10c and September ribs 12½c higher

CONSULTATION WAS VAIN.

A physican has just returned from China, laden with stories of Chinese medicine. "Medical consultations are carried to their extreme limit in China," he said. "There, when any one becomes seriously ill, a consultation of fifteen or twenty doctors is held. The doctors fill the house with their arguments. They make as much noise as a political convention. But such a consultation as that would be considered small and futile if a great man—a mandarin, say, of the third class—were to be ill. To consult on his case at least a hundred doctors would gather together. A member of the royal family was taken sick while I was in China, and my Chinese host told me with a good deal of pride that the largest consultation known to history had been held over the sick man. No fewer than 316 physicians, he said, had come from every part of the kingdom to study and discuss the case. The royal patient, I heard afterward, died. This mammoth consultation had been held in vain.—New York Tribune.

NO HOPE FOR HIM

"Yes, but they'll turn you out the church for it!"

"Well, you kin holler halleluja, on the highway."

"Yes, but they'll arrest you for disturbin' the peace!"

"Don't seem to be any hope for you?"

"Oh, yes! You kin be jest as miserable as you please!"—Atlanta Constitution.
